Other Ideas (add more on the back)	Give stuffed dogs a bath, children bring in pictures of their own dogs (or family dogs e.g. Grandmas)  Name the parts of a dog- paws, muzzle, ears etc.  Arrange to have someone come and wash a dog at the centre or talk about doing it. There are online videos of dog washing. Change colour and spot activities  Play Doggy, Doggy Where (or Who) Is/has Your Bone? It's a good activity to use as a whole group time.  The original version begins with one student ("Doggy") sitting on a chair with his/her back to the remainder of the group of students who are seated on the floor.  A "bone" (can be made from cardboard, labeled with the word "bone") is placed on the floor directly behind the chair.  To begin the game, the teacher silently selects one of the children from the group on the floor to go up and take the "bone" then sits on it to conceal it from the Doggy.  Once the bone is out of sight, the group chants, Doggy, Doggy, who has your bone?  Doggy then turns to face the group and guesses who has the bone until it is found. The person who was in possession of the bone is now the Doggy.
